Turf Talk March 2026

I'm laughing. No, I'm not afraid to have a little chuckle at myself. I accept it! Besides, I'm not perfect.

In review of previous newsletter articles and preparation to write this one upcoming, I'm still in a snowy state of mind, or is that brain fog? Of course, the snow has melted, and the "freshly covered, soft, unbroken blanket" is no longer present.

The course is again exposed to its imperfections, which is not necessarily a bad thing. In fact, I feel it as a re-awakening and it is motivating! Seeing the golf course again shows the work that has been performed and the work that remains to be done

Continued.....

I am excited to ramp up our work effort to continue our progress.

Progress. What is progress? Is it perfection? No, certainly not in this case. Is perfection attainable? No, 'perfection' is impossible. So, again, what is progress? Perhaps, it is just a vague attempt to sound as though we are maintaining and improving a wonderful golf course despite the conveniences of a modern irrigation system, bunkers that were built on top of a rock quarry, and aging equipment that is rapidly approaching the end of its lifespan.

I apologize. I regress but I'm reminded of the valuable lessons I learned as a beginning golfer many years ago.

Yes, there are many, many lessons in life that golf teaches: resilience, patience, integrity and self-regulation, humility and adaptability. In addition to these valuable lessons, I learned a few expressions in golf as well, "Rub of the Green" and "Play it as it Lies". Even though "Rub of the Green" is no longer a phrase used in the official Rules of Golf, both expressions are frequently used on and off the golf course.

They represent accepting reality, dealing with difficult situations as they are, and not trying to change circumstances. Meaning? Golf is not perfect, golf courses are not perfect, Life is not perfect.

Ok, you know I am going to through you a curveball. Jack Nicklaus, (young guys are asking themselves, who's that?), once said, "If you want a perfect lie, use a tee!"

Looking forward to seeing you on the course,

Dan Hurley GCS

No Fishing!

While we understand the ponds are very attractive to those that like to fish, it is very dangerous to fish on a golf course. No Fishing is allowed and if you see anyone fishing, please report it to the Pro Shop. The Golf Course, Lee's Hill, accepts no liability to those that get injured while fishing on the golf course.
