

Generous donation to Cancer Center

Río Grande, PR (March 7, 2012) - The Puerto Rico Open has already contributed over $200,000 to charity this year, and it kept on giving Thursday with a $6,500 donation to the Auxilio Mutuo Hospital's Cancer Center.

The donation, made in conjunction with the Díaz Family, will directly help patients at the Cancer Center. "We will use this money to help patients economically, particularly those who have insurance but don't have enough money to pay high deductibles," said Fernando Cabanillas, the Center's medical director. "I want to thank the PGA TOUR, the organizers, and especially the Díaz family, which has been a huge supporter."

Eugenia Mayoral de Díaz highlighted her family's long-time support of the Cancer Center, while Puerto Rico Open chairman Sidney Wolf reaffirmed the tournament and the PGA TOUR's commitment to charity.

"The Puerto Rico Open has donated over $4 million since its inception in 2008, and we will continue to support this and other organizations that do such important work," said Wolf.
