Josh Waller
Teaching Professional

I grew up living and breathing golf in Hood River. My dad, the head pro at Hood River Golf & Country Club for 30 years (now retired), has been my mentor but I'd say I have learned something from every person I have ever played with, regardless of age or ability.

My history includes competitive high school golf, teaching junior camps and coaching middle and high school teams, and ten years as an Assistant Pro. I love to teach both kids and adults. If there's anything I'm more passionate about than golf, it's teaching golf to others.

I focus lessons on tee and approach shots, sand play, short game, putting, course management, mental game, etc. I take a personalized approach to each player, learning how they relate to the world and using that as a communication tool. I love and respect the science behind the game, but my style tends more toward the organic. I can help you find what you need to get better at golf. It's meant to be enjoyed, and I would love to see you do just that.
