Turf Talk May 2024

Thank goodness the weather is finally changing, and the grass is finally greening up. With the warmer temperatures arriving, the bentgrass seed has finally germinated. Unfortunately, the percentage of germination was less than desirable due to the length of time it took for the soil to warm up. With the few pounds of seed left over from the bulk order in the spring, I will experiment with a later seeding date, possibly when the poa annua (annual bluegrass) is in a weakened state due to the warmer temperatures of June. Remember this seed is rated higher than other bentgrasses when interseeded into existing stands of turf.

Christian and the whole crew have had their hands full getting the irrigation up and running. We are uncovering heads that have been thought lost, finding valves that were considered not installed and finetuning the satellite controllers. Along the way we have been busy making repairs to the broken pipe and adding improvements to the existing system if an open hole presents itself.

For those that use the Driving Range you may have noticed a few changes to the teeing area. We have implemented a rotation of practice lanes to improve the rotation management so time can allow the divoted areas to recover and fill in before they are used again.

We are also working on the bunkers and trying to return their use back into the round as opposed to taking relief or use of a hand-wedge to get the ball out. We have experimented with ways to do this and have developed a way to at least make them more playable from at least inside the hazard area.

Stay tuned and see you on the course!

It has been said that May is the gateway to summer, full of inspiration and excitement that looks forward to a long and relaxing summer. While May is upon us and the cool and rainy days have yet to leave us I too look forward to the warm and sunny days ahead.

Our Second Sunday of the Month Brunches will be taking a summer snooze and will return this fall. April's brunch ended on a high note with Masters Sunday. The weather cooperated and the day was filled with good golf and tasty food. Thank you to everyone who stopped by!

I know everyone is asking what about beverage carts? We are currently in the process of bringing on new team members for the spring and summertime and plan of getting those carts out and about starting in a few weeks. Please know I appreciate your patience and understanding as we work on the carts and fine tune and improve this feature.

"The More You Know"

Stock vs. Broth: What's the Difference? Stock and broth are similar, but they're not exactly the same. Here are the ways they're alike and different. Stock and broth are both the foundation of cooking, from soups and stews, grains to vegetables, sauces and gravies. The two are used nearly interchangeably in print, and in fact, many recipes will call for stock OR broth, which raises the question. What exactly is the difference between stock and broth?

What's in stock and what's in broth? The main difference between stock and broth starts with the primary ingredient. Stock is generally made from bones, and broth is generally made from "the meat". In both cases, they are often supported with aromatic vegetables, but stock is generally left unseasoned for maximum flexibility in recipes, whereas broth will usually contain at least salt and pepper. For stock, bones are usually roasted before use for color and flavor, for broth, the meats tend to be used directly from raw. This is why many stocks are darker than broths from the same proteins.

Is There a Difference In How They're Used? No, stock and broth can be used interchangeably. Stock has a richer, deeper flavor and mouth feel, making it better at adding body to a dish, whereas broth might be a better choice when you want to let other flavors shine. Stock is made by simmering bones, which release gelatin and proteins to yield a rich, deep flavor that's further bolstered by mirepoix (chopped carrots, celery and onion) and aromatics such as herbs and bay leaves.

Broth, on the other hand, relies primarily on meat (i.e. chicken, beef, shellfish) for flavoring, simmers for less time, and contains a slightly less robust flavor and usually has more sodium.

There's less of a difference between vegetable stock and broth because they're not made with bones, which contain the collagen responsible for giving animal-based stocks their viscous consistency. But definitely a conversation for another day!

And now you know, so whether its stock or broth, it's all good so enjoy!
